

Counselling

Counselling puts Carer needs and preferences at the centre of the conversation. Counsellors see the Carer as the expert in their own life. Counselling empowers Carers to make decisions and take action that makes sense, and is meaningful to their individual and unique circumstances.

Carers SA offers up to six counselling sessions. The counselling sessions are available in metropolitan and regional areas via face to face or online.

One-on-one counselling

Carer Counselling is offered where Carers can speak one-on-one with a counsellor who is experienced in supporting Carers.

This type of counselling allows Carers to speak openly and honestly about how they are feeling in relation to their caring role. Counselling provides a safe space to explore specific concerns or issues and work together on the way forward.

Group counselling

Group counselling can have benefits such as shared learning, increased connection with Carers and the advantage of being able to provide and receive support from others. It isn't recommended for all Carers though; individual counselling may be more suitable for many Carers.

"They put me in contact with an amazing counsellor, and he's been really supportive and helps me get through the hard times. He helps me step back and really look at things clearly because it is so easy to run on autopilot and not see the forest for the trees."
